Turin, May 5, N. S.

BY Letters from Nice there is Reason to apprehend, that the French and Spaniards are again preparing to attack the Islands of St. Marguerite, and to pass the Var. The Islands are well fortified, and the Var at this Time of the Year is very much swelled by the Melting of the Snows in the Mountains. Rear Admiral Byng joined Vice Admiral Medley upon the 17th of last Month, O. S. at Vado. Capt. Holcomb, of his Britannick Majesty's Ship Nassau, has lately taken and sent into Savone two Transports of the Enemy, having on board 210 Spanish and French Soldiers and Officers. These two Vessels were Part of the first Embarkation, and had been driven into the Island of Corsica, from whence, after several Weeks Stay, they had taken the Opportunity of a fair Wind for attempting to run into Genoa. Marquis d'Ormea set out this Morning for the Imperial Army, in order to concert every Thing with Count Schulemburg for the March of the Sardinian Battalions, which are to advance immediately to Sestri, and from thence to Bisagno. They are to be commanded by Lieutenant General Count le Roque, two Major Generals, and three Brigadiers, who are all ordered to repair immediately to Savona, where the Troops are to assemble, and from thence to join Count Schulemburg; and the two Admirals are preparing every Thing for transporting the Artillery to Bisagno.
